Blaise Richards represents major property insurers focusing on complex property damage cases caused by construction and/or product defects. He advises employers, businesses, and insurers in a wide range of subrogation matters involving explosions, structural damage, construction defects, products liability, and other catastrophic failures.

Blaise worked full-time while attending Rutgers Law School – Camden in the evening, including serving as a full-time clerk in the Subrogation Department during his final two years of law school.

Prior to joining White and Williams, Blaise worked as a claims adjuster for a prominent third-party claims administrator handling both property damage and bodily injury claims. This experience has transitioned well into Blaise's legal career, providing him with a deeper understanding of the needs of insurers.
